BE UP AND DOING.

BY JOSEPHINE POLLARD. There is no place for hile men In such a world as this is, For who a single talent hides The ten-fold increase misses: With busy hand, with active brain, Our strength we are renewing, And if aught worthy we'd achieve,

We wait in vain for fortune's purse To fill our lap with treasure, And lose our interest on the notes We sacrifice to pleasure; In misery and poverty

We must be up and doing.

Our folly we'll be rueing. So while the golden numents last, We'd best be up and doing.

A holiday once in a while Adds strength unto endeavor; But who would prize a jubilee That lasted on forever? So if we've any work to do-And who can do without it?-We never will accomplish much Un'ess we set about it.

There is no room for idle men

In this great hive of labor, Where each a duty owes himself, t thaty owes his neighbor: needle your feet, within your hearts, have renewing, within you. Thirty awake, To-day by the ministing! I sunit films ! Turry varst stone
